Date: January 12, 2010

Significance: The team of Claire Williamson, Dr. Sylvia Hall-Ellis, and Stacey Bowers won a grant entitled, "Reintroducing the Value of Law Librarians to Public Librarians" that they will complete over the next 12 months. This grant will increase awareness and the value of law librarianship among public librarians in Colorado. The team will work with public librarians to assess their needs and perspectives in regard to legal information through moderated focus groups. The data collected will be used to create strategies and technologies that public librarians could adopt for use with their patrons.

Date: February 5, 2010

Significance: Stacey Bowers, Dr. Sylvia Hall-Ellis and Claire Williamson were awarded a Public Good Fund grant for the Colorado Law Project. This project will create a public, legal information gateway website designed initially for use by Colorado's public librarians and the general public. The project website will provide a single access point for publically available legal information specific to Colorado. The website will focus on information most needed by the general public and will serve as a community outreach tool for public librarians.

Presentation Title: Designing Externship Courses in Specialized Areas and Class Content that Engages Students

Location: Externships V Conference, Miami Florida

Date: March 5, 2010

Co-presenters: Denise Platfoot Lacey, University of Dayton; Carl Circo, University of Arkansas

Significance: In this presentation, Ann discussed the capstone course to the Sustainable Natural Resources Development Certificate she will teach for the first time in the ENRLP Graduate Program in Fall 2010. Sustainability has traditionally been focused on attaining harmony with nature rather than humanity. This certificate program focuses on both—harmony with nature and humanity--and will help prepare our students (who will work with business leaders in these kinds of issues) for a morally complex and sustainable future so they can accept their moral obligations and duties to future generations, the deprived and the environment. Partnering with a local organization and utilizing the concept of “Action Learning,” students will work in teams as they engage in real time problem solving of a complex issue involving social and environmental issues. We believe this is the first course of its kind taught at a US law school.

Appointment/award Name: Citations of my amicus brief in McDonald v. Chicago.

Significance: Alito plurality: Chicago residents now face one of the highest murder rates in the country and rates of other violent crimes that exceed the average in comparable cities.² 2....see also Brief for International Law Enforcement Educators and Trainers Association et al. as Amici Curiae 17–21, and App. A (providing comparisons of Chicago's rates of assault, murder, and robbery to average crime rates in 24 other large cities). Stevens dissent: In their briefs to this Court, several amici have sought to bolster petitioners' claim still further by invoking a right to individual self-defense.³¹ 31 See, e.g., Brief for Professors of Philosophy, Criminology, Law, and Other Fields as Amici Curiae; Brief for International Law Enforcement Educators and Trainers Association et al. as Amici Curiae 29–45; Brief for 34 California District Attorneys et al. as Amici Curiae 12–31. Stevens dissent: Chicago's handgun ban, in itself, has divided researchers. Compare Brief for Professors of Criminal Justice as Amici Curiae (arguing that ordinance has been effective at reducing gun violence), with Brief for International Law Enforcement Educators and Trainers Association et al. as Amici Curiae 17–26 (arguing that ordinance has been a failure). Publication Title: How Many Global Deaths from Arms? Reasons to Question the 740,000 Factoid Being Used to Promote the Arms Trade Treaty

Date of Acceptance: 4/13/2010

Date of Publication: 2010

Co-Authors: Paul Gallant, Joanne D. Eisen

Full Citation: 5 NYU Journal of Law & Liberty, number 3

Subject Area: International Law

Significance: Currently, the United Nations is drafting an Arms Trade Treaty to impose strict controls on firearms and other weapons. In support of hasty adoption of the Treaty, a UN-related organization of Treaty supporters is has produced a report claiming that armed violence is responsible for 740,000 deaths annually. This Article carefully examines the claim. We find that the claim is based on dubious assumptions, cherry-picking data, and mathematical legerdemain which is inexplicably being withheld from the public. The refusal to disclose the mathematical calculations used to create the 740,000 factoid is itself cause for serious suspicion; our own calculations indicate that the 740,000 figure is far too high. Further, while the report claims that 60% of homicides are perpetrated with firearms, our review of the data on which report claimed to rely yields a 22% rate. The persons responsible for the report have refused to release their homicide calculations, or any other calculations. This Article also shows how a narrow focus on restricting firearms ownership continues to distract international attention from life-saving, viable solutions. We propose some practical alternatives which have already saved lives in war-ravaged areas.

Presentation Title: Mile High Summit on Training

Location: Denver, Colorado

Date: July 11, 2010

Co-presenters: Molly Peckman (Dechert LLP), Linda-Jean Schneider (Cahill Gordon & Reindell, LLP), and Tommy Preston, University of South Carolina School of Law.

Significance: With the economy putting pressure on law firms and law schools, the talk about who and how to train law students to become practicing attorneys is becoming action. Law firms have announced in-depth training programs where incoming associates are paid less, but enrolled in intensive training on practicing law. Law Schools have added practice-oriented courses, and expanding their existing skills training programs. This program examined how the current economic crisis is shifting the focus of training law students and graduates to be practice-ready lawyers.

Presentation Title: Law Practice as a Morally Responsible Business: Reintegrating Ethics into Economics and Law
Location: Stanford Law School, Stanford, CA
Date: July 16, 2010
Co-presenters: Prof. Russell G. Pearce, Fordham Law School
Significance: We study the dominance of unconstrained self-interest in American culture, its impact on clients and lawyers and the ways in which it excludes ethics and other values from the practice of law. The paper presented at the conference develops the concept of relational self-interest as an alternative to unconstrained self-interest, explains its meaning for clients and lawyers and suggests appropriate reforms to the rules of professional conduct based on the notion of relational self-interest.
