

Faculty Bios—International Law Anniversary Weekend Symposium on: Emerging Issues in International Law with a Focus on the Americas

David Akerson

David J. Akerson served previously as a prosecutor at the United Nations International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and he was the Chief of Evidence at the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda. He also was a staff attorney for South African Lawyers for Human Rights in Pretoria, South Africa during the apartheid era. He is a Visiting Lecturer at the University of Denver Sturm College of Law and his current research focuses on the application of humanitarian law to drones and other robotic weapons. Mr. Akerson received his JD from Florida State University and his BA in Business and Computer Science from Furman University.

Barton Alexander

Mr. Bart Alexander is Chief Corporate Responsibility Officer at Molson Coors Brewing Company, a major global brewer. Bart champions and reports Molson Coors' global commitments to ethical performance, alcohol responsibility, sustainability and community investment, what the company calls "Our Beer Print." Under his watch, Molson Coors achieved listing on the Dow Jones Sustainability Index and was recognized by the Carbon Disclosure Project as an S&P 500 leader in both transparency and performance. Nine in ten people at Molson Coors believe that the company is responsible about environmental issues and in the community, a major driver of world-class employee engagement at the company.

Before joining the beer industry, Bart held senior positions in economic development and human services at the federal, state and local levels. He has a particular interest in the convergence of public and private sector values and responsibilities in societies around the world. Even as governments face challenges of demonstrating their accountability and cost-effectiveness in achieving promised outcomes, businesses face issues of sustainability and inclusiveness. In both developed and emerging economies, the roles of corporations, governments, and civil society organizations face reinvention.

Bart is a magna cum laude graduate of Harvard, with a concentration in comparative government. He holds a masters degree from the London School of Economics with a focus on health and social policy and economics. He later served as a Senior Executive Fellow at the Harvard Kennedy School and completed the Harvard Business School course in Corporate Social Responsibility. Bart actively participates in civic affairs, including leadership roles with local, national and international NGOs.

Bart is married to Dyan, a public affairs professional. They are actively involved with their families, including teens and adult children and grandchildren.

David Aronofsky

David Aronofsky is the University of Montana's (UM) Legal Counsel, as well as an adjunct faculty member in the UM Schools of Law and Education. As UM Legal Counsel, he oversees all legal work for the University's several campuses located throughout western Montana. David received his J.D. and B.S. in Education from the University of Texas at Austin; a Ph.D. in Higher Education from Florida State University; and an M.Ed. in Counseling from Southern Methodist University. He is licensed to practice law in Montana, Texas and the District of Columbia. In addition, he is admitted to practice in the U.S. Supreme Court and a number of federal appellate and district courts. He is an elected American Law Institute member.

David's UM law teaching includes Technology Law, International Business & Trade Law, Public International Law, Advanced Legislation (requiring students to draft bills for the Montana Legislature); and Advanced Education Law and Higher Education Law. He also teaches a UM course in Chile every January. He received a 2001 Fulbright Scholar award to teach U.S. law on a continuing year basis each summer in Uruguay, where several other UM Law School faculty, and Montana's Supreme Court Chief Justice, have joined him as instructors.

David's broad range of scholarly international and education legal publications include two co-authored Montana Education Law books. He participates in UM international law and education projects involving Latin America, China, Taiwan, and Europe.

In addition to his teaching and practice, David has prepared numerous bills enacted into law by Montana's Legislature, including several related to Montana University System. He also authored higher education governance and tax reform white papers on proposed state constitutional amendments.

Before coming to The University of Montana in 1994, David was an attorney at a large Washington, D.C. law firm. His legal specialty areas included education law; most aspects of private and public international law with emphasis on Latin America and on developing countries generally, including in-depth involvement with international trade organizations and multilateral development banks; and commercial and civil rights litigation. He received a 1990 Fulbright Scholar award to serve as a legal advisor to Chile's Congress during the country's first year of post-dictatorship democratic rule and to design a Chilean law school legislation course/clinical program. For the past 20 years he has continuously lectured and consulted with emerging democracy governments on economic and political law reforms. He worked with all 50 U.S. state legislatures as coordinator of his firm's state government relations practice; and with most U.S. Congressional committees on numerous substantive law matters including international trade and finance.

Prior to becoming a lawyer, David was a higher education consultant in the Peace Corps and privately in Chile, where he designed the reorganization of two universities. He also worked on various education and human resources training projects elsewhere throughout Latin America. He speaks and writes Spanish fluently.

Anthony Carroll

Anthony Carroll was recently appointed Senior Associate at the Center for Strategic and International Studies.

Tony has spent 35 years working on trade, investment and development in Africa and other parts of the developing world. He specializes in promoting new technologies and processes in such areas as health care, food preservation, renewable energy and financial services. His clients have included multi-national companies, foundations, universities, business associations, multi-lateral and bi-lateral development institutions and sovereign governments. Prior to joining Manchester Trade in 1995, he was a partner and Neil and Shaw in Washington DC and served as Assistant General Counsel to the Peace Corps from 1986-89.

Tony served as Chairman of the American Bar Association Africa Law Committee for four years where he directed 35 pro-bono projects in Africa. He was also a charter member of the ABA's Special Task Force on Foreign Corrupt Practices and successfully lobbied the OECD to issue its Anti-Bribery Convention. He served on a bi-partisan working committee that designed and advocated for the passage of the ground-breaking Africa Growth and Opportunity Act. He served on the Board of Directors for Street Law and Eye Care.

Tony has served on the advisory committees or boards of EXIM Bank, Overseas Private Investment Corporation, the United State Trade Representative and the Smithsonian Institution's Woodrow Wilson Center for INternational Scholars. He was a nominated by teh House Majority Leader to the Board of the Millennium Challenge Corporation and has testifies before Congress on three occasions.

Tony is also an Adjunct Professor at Johns Hopkins University's School of Advanced International Studies and has lectured widely in Africa, Europe and the Middle East. He received a BA in Economics and a JD from DU in 1975 and 1984, respectively. He also has an MPA from the University of Wisconsin and serves on UW's Board of Visitors.

Tony has been married to Alison Carroll for 23 years and they have four children.

John P. Cerone

Professor John Cerone is Professor of Law and Director of the Center for International Law and Policy at New England Law | Boston, where he teaches Public International Law, Human Rights Law, International Humanitarian Law, and International Criminal Law. He has been a fellow at the Max Planck Institute for Comparative Public Law and International Law and a visiting scholar at the International Criminal Court. He has also been a Fulbright scholar at both the Danish Institute for Human Rights and the Tokyo University of Foreign Studies.

Before joining the New England faculty in 2004, Professor Cerone was executive director of the War Crimes Research Office at American University Washington College of Law, where he served as a legal adviser to various international criminal courts and tribunals.

As a practicing international lawyer, Professor Cerone has worked for a number of different intergovernmental and nongovernmental organizations, including the United Nations, the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, the International Secretariat of Amnesty International, and the International Crisis Group. He also has extensive field experience in conflict and post-conflict environments, such as Afghanistan, Kosovo, Sierra Leone, and East Timor. He is accredited by the United Nations to represent the American Society of International Law before various U.N. bodies and is an elected member of the International Institute of Humanitarian Law. In 2009 he served as special adviser to the first U.S. delegation to the UN Human Rights Council. He is the author of several articles and book chapters on international law, as well as the casebook Public International Law: Cases, Problems, and Texts (with Dinah Shelton and Stephen McCaffrey).

Kate Doyle

Kate Doyle is senior analyst of U.S. policy in Latin America at the National Security Archive, a research institute and advocacy organization based at George Washington University that campaigns for the citizen's right to know, investigates U.S. national security and foreign policy, and uses the Freedom of Information Act to obtain and publish declassified U.S. documents. Since 1992, Doyle has worked with human rights organizations, truth commissions and prosecutors to obtain government records from secret archives that shed light on state violence. She has testified as an expert witness in numerous human rights hearings, such as the 2008 trial of Peru's former President Alberto Fujimori for his role in overseeing military death squads and the case currently before the Spanish National Court of the 1989 assassination of the Jesuit priests in El Salvador. She edited the Archive's digital collections of thousands of declassified records on El Salvador and Guatemala and has published dozens of reports, book chapters, articles, and blogs in Spanish-language and U.S. media. In May, Doyle will receive the 2012 ALBA / Puffin Foundation Award for Human Rights Activism.

Stephen Gottesfeld

Stephen P. Gottesfeld is Senior Vice President, General Counsel and Corporate Secretary at Newmont Mining Corporation of Canada Ltd, a gold producer with significant assets or operations in the United States, Australia, Peru, Indonesia, Ghana, Canada, New Zealand and Mexico. Mr. Gottesfeld was named Vice President and General Counsel of Newmont Mining in January 2010 and Corporate Secretary in July 2011 after serving as Vice President, Communications and Public Affairs since 2006. Mr. Gottesfeld was Newmont's Associate General Counsel from 2004 to 2006, responsible for Newmont's Latin American, African and Central Asian legal offices. From 2002 to 2004, Mr. Gottesfeld was Newmont's Associate General Counsel and General Manager of Newmont Peru S.R.L., spending three years of his career with Newmont working in Lima, Peru. Prior to joining Newmont in 1997 as senior counsel, Mr. Gottesfeld was an associate at the law firm of Holland & Hart LLP.

He earned a law degree and a master's degree in international affairs from the University of Denver in 1993 and received a Bachelor of Arts degree in economics from The Colorado College in 1989.

Larry Johnson

Larry D. Johnson is currently Adjunct Professor of Law at Columbia Law School, teaching the UN Externship program that includes a seminar on the "Law and Practice of the United Nations". He previously held various positions in UN organizations: UN Assistant Secretary-General for Legal Affairs, Chef de Cabinet of the Office of the President, International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia (ICTY) and Legal Adviser, International Atomic Energy Agency. As a member of the UN Office of Legal Affairs, he participated in the drafting of the Statutes of the ICTY and of the Special Tribunal for Lebanon and served on the Management Committee of the Special Court for Sierra Leone. He was a member of the Secretary-General's Board of Inquiry concerning certain incidents in Gaza and represented the SG during the testimony of UN staff members in cases before the International Criminal Court. He received his degrees from the University of Nebraska (B.A.) and Harvard University (J.D. and M.P.A.).

G. Kristian Miccio

Kristian Miccio is a nationally recognized expert on the law as it affects survivors of male intimate violence. She has written, lectured, litigated and testified, at Congressional and State Legislative hearings, on the issue of male intimate violence, women survivors and conceptions of state accountability. Miccio was the author of the NYS law that opened up the family and criminal courts to survivors of male intimate violence and one of the authors of the state's mandatory arrest law in domestic violence cases. She has won numerous awards for her work on behalf of battered women-and for her teaching. And she has been interviewed by the print and electronic media on such matters as hate crimes, violence against women, Miranda, the OJ Simpson, Kobe Bryant and Laci Peterson cases, to name a few. At the College of Law, Prof. Miccio teaches criminal law and procedure, family law, jurisprudence, and seminars on the Holocaust, the Law and Domestic Violence. In 2007, Miccio was awarded a Fulbright and taught at University College of Dublin School of Law and lectured throughout Ireland on the issue of male intimate violence, the state and conceptions of state accountability.

Professor Miccio is the recipient of numerous scholarly awards. She is a Fulbright Scholar, Marie Curie Transfer of Knowledge Scholar, Erasmus Mundus Scholar and a Fulbright Senior Specialist. The Marie Curie and Erasmus Mundas fellowships were awarded by the European Commission and all of the awards were conferred because of Professor Miccio's research and scholarship on the issue of male intimate violence, state accountability and conceptions of justice. Miccio has been on faculty at the University of Dublin School of Law and it's School of Social Justice as part of her Fulbright award and currently maintains a professional relationship with both departments as a visiting professor and consultant on experiential and interdisciplinary (cross-discipline) learning.

Jennifer Moore

Prior to joining the UNM law faculty in 1995, Jennifer Moore worked for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, first as an associate protection officer in West Africa, then as a legal officer in Washington, D.C. In Washington, D.C., she often conducted training sessions on refugee law for government officials, immigrant advocates, and other audiences. Her interest in refugee issues began when she was a student at Amherst College. Following graduation in 1983, she worked as a research assistant for the Refugee Policy Group, a think tank on refugee issues.

During law school at Harvard, she spent a summer conducting field research on the protection of Salvadoran refugees in Honduras for Catholic Relief Services. This agency provided assistance to the refugees in camps administered by the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees.

Moore has continued to take on occasional projects for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees as well as doing a consultancy, during the summer of 2000, with the War-Torn Societies Project International in Croatia.

She co-authored (with Musalo & Boswell) the first law school casebook on refugee law, Refugee Law and Policy: A Comparative and International Approach (Carolina Academic Press, 4th Ed. 2011). Moore brings her expertise to the law school, teaching courses on refugee and human rights law.

In 2002-03, Moore was in Tanzania on a Fulbright Scholarship, where she taught international law at the University of Dar es Salaam in Tanzania. She also planned and facilitated human rights workshops for Burundian refugees residing in camps in Western Tanzania.

In August, 2004, the Dean of Arts and Sciences appointed Moore Director of UNM Peace Studies, an interdisciplinary undergraduate minor in the study of the causes of violence and alternatives to violence. Her term as Director ended in December 2006, and she remains active in the program as a member of the Peace Studies Curriculum Committee.

Moore's most recent publication is a monograph entitled Humanitarian Law in Action within Africa (Oxford University Press, 2012), in which she explores the various ways in which humanitarian and human rights law serve as tools of conflict resolution and transitional justice in countries emerging from protracted civil wars. The three country studies in her book build on field research she conducted in Uganda, Burundi and Sierra Leone in 2010.

Ved P. Nanda

Professor Ved P. Nanda is Thompson G. Marsh Professor of Law and Director of the International Legal Studies Program at the University of Denver Sturm College of Law, and in 1992 he was named John Evans University Professor. From 1994 to 2008 he served as Vice Provost for Internationalization at the University of Denver. In 2007 Professor Nanda was honored with a $1 million gift to the College of Law, and a matching amount from friends and former students, to found the Nanda Center for International & Comparative Law. The Center began its programming in 2008.

He is Past President of the World Jurist Association, former Vice President of the American Society of International Law and its counselor, and a member of the advisory council of the United States Institute of Human Rights. He currently serves as Honorary President of the World Jurist Association, an elected member of the American Law Institute and as a council member-at-large for the American Bar Association Section of International Law and Practice, Honorary Vice-President of the International Law Association – American Branch. He was formerly the United States Delegate to the World Federation of the United Nations Associations, Geneva, Vice-Chair of its Executive Council, and on the Board of Directors of the United Nations Association of the United States of America.

Among his numerous national and international awards Professor Nanda has received the Gandhi, King, Ikeda Award for Peace Building from Soka Gakkai International and Morehouse College and the Lifetime Best Teacher Award from the Indian Law Teachers Association. He was awarded the World Jurist Association's Highest Order of Justice and earlier its World Legal Scholar award. He was also the recipient of the United Nations Association's Human Rights Award and the Anti-Defamation League's Civil Rights Award.

He has received honorary doctorates from Soka University in Tokyo, Japan, and from Bundelkhand University, Jhansi, India. He is widely published in law journals and national magazines, has authored or co-authored 23 books in the various fields of international law and more than 200 chapters and major law review articles, and has been a Distinguished Visiting Professor and Scholar at a number of universities in the United States and abroad. Professor Nanda is the 2010 UN Day Chair for Colorado as appointed by Governor Bill Ritter. He writes regularly on international issues for the Denver Post and is a frequent commentator on TV and radio, including the BBC and the Voice of America.

John E. Noyes

Professor Noyes has been on the California Western faculty since 1982 and has also taught international law courses as a visiting professor at the University of Connecticut School of Law, Wake Forest University School of Law, Roger Williams University School of Law, Victoria University of Wellington (New Zealand), and the University of San Diego's Institute on International and Comparative Law (Oxford and Paris programs). During the spring of 2005 he was a Distinguished Visiting Professor at Suffolk University Law School in Boston.

Noyes is active in several international law organizations and is currently Chair of the Executive Committee of the American Branch of the International Law Association. He is co-author of one of the leading law school textbooks on international law, and the author of more than 50 book chapters, law review articles, and essays on the international law of the sea, international dispute resolution, and other topics. Noyes is a member of the State Bar of Connecticut, where he practiced law before entering academia.

Jose Antonio Peláez Bardales

Dr. Jose Antonio Peláez Bardales served as lead prosecutor in the ground-breaking prosecution of former Peruvian President Alberto Fujimori. Fujimori was tried for corruption and human rights abuses that occurred during his presidency, including ordering the Grupo Colina death squad to commit the Barrios Altos and La Cantuta massacres, the assassination of journalist Gustavo Gorriti and businessman Samuel Dyer. Fujimori's conviction is the first conviction by a domestic court of a democratically elected president for crimes against humanity. The trial was lauded for its strict adherence to due process. The Financial Times reported that international observers had "hailed the trial as a model of due process," and according to Human Rights Watch the trial would "go down in history as a model of what we want to see in terms of rule of law and justice ... in Latin America."

Robert Petit

Robert Petit was called to the Bar in 1988 and started his legal career as a Crown Prosecutor in Montreal for eight years eventually focusing on organised criminality and complex cases. From 1996 he embarked on an international career first as a Legal Officer in the Office of the Prosecutor of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda. Subsequently between 1999 and 2004, he was a Regional Legal Advisor for the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo, a Prosecutor for the Serious Crimes Unit of the United Nations Missions of Support to East Timor, and a Senior Trial Attorney with the Office of the Prosecutor of the Special Court for Sierra Leone. In 2006, he was named by the United Nations as International Co Prosecutor of the Extraordinary Chambers in the Courts of Cambodia, a position he held until September 2009 when he returned to Canada and his current position as Counsel and Team Leader with the War Crimes Section of Canada's Federal Department of Justice. He is the 2009 recipient of the Frederick K Cox International Humanitarian Award for Advancing Global Justice and in 2011 was identified by an international search committee as one of four qualified candidates for the position of Prosecutor of the International Criminal Court.

Douglas G. Scrivner

Doug Scrivner, former General Counsel of Accenture, retired in 2011 after 31 years with the company and 14 years as General Counsel. During his tenure, he also oversaw the company's government relations and served as Corporate Secretary, Compliance Officer and as a member of Accenture's Executive Leadership Team.

Mr. Scrivner has participated and held leadership positions in several educational and professional organizations, including serving as a member of the Board of Trustees of the University of Denver; Chairman of the Visiting Committee, University of Denver Sturm College of Law; National Co-Chairman of the Second Century Campaign, University of Denver Sturm College of Law; a member of the Board of Visitors, Sanford Institute of Public Policy, Duke University; a member of the Arts & Sciences Campaign Committee, Duke University; a member of the Advisory Board to the Project for Attorney Retention; a member of the California State Bar Academy Strategic Task Force and an occasional guest speaker at UC Berkeley School of Law and Northwestern University School of Law.

Mr. Scrivner received an A.B. in political science and history from Duke University, an M.Sc. in international relations from the London School of Economics, and a J.D. from the University of Denver Sturm College of Law.

Daniel Warner

Of US and Swiss citizenship, Daniel Warner earned his BA in Philosophy and Religion from Amherst College, USA and a PhD in Political Science from the Graduate Institute of International Studies in Geneva, Switzerland. His book An Ethic of Responsibility in International Relations was awarded the Marie Schappler Prize by the Société Académique de Genève in 1991.

Dr. Warner has lectured and published extensively on US foreign policy, ethics, refugees, international law and international relations theory. Author, editor or co-editor of eleven books and numerous refereed articles, his work has been translated into Arabic, Azeri, French, German, Persian, and Russian. He has lectured at Oxford, Cambridge, Harvard, Yale, Moscow State University, the University of Tokyo, Fudan University (Shanghai), Hebrew University, Fundacao Dom Cabral (Brazil) and the University of Paris, Sorbonne, among other universities as well as in the public and private sectors and has been an invited scholar by Australian National University, University of Nebraska-Lincoln, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Republic of China, the Japan Foundation and Oxford University.

Dr. Warner is a frequent commentator in the media including Agence France Presse, Associated Press, British Broadcasting Corporation, Europe 1, Financial Times, Fox News, France Info, International Herald Tribune, National Public Radio, Reuters, Time Magazine, and Voice of America as well national television and radio in a dozen countries throughout the world. He currently writes two blogs for Edipresse, one on world politics and the other on the former Soviet Union as well as participating in a weekly radio show on current affairs for World Radio Switzerland. He has served as an advisor to the ILO, UNHCR and NATO as well as a consultant to the Ministries of Foreign Affairs and Defense of Switzerland and the private sector.

Dr. Warner established the Program for the Study of International Organization(s) (PSIO) in 1994 at the Graduate Institute, which served as an interface among academics, policy-makers, the private sector and NGO's. The PSIO organized training courses for young government officials from 27 countries in Eastern and Central Europe, Algeria, Burundi, the Caucasus, Central Asia, Iran, Morocco, Tunisia and the Former Yugoslavia. The PSIO grew into the Centre for International Governance which organized training courses and support programs throughout the world including the Great Lakes region of Africa and Kosovo as well as facilitating numerous multi-stakeholder activities.

Dr. Warner has organized and moderated major conferences, including for the World Economic Forum, the Swiss Government and the private sector. Retired as Deputy to the Director from the Graduate Institute, he is currently the Assistant Director for International Affairs at the Geneva Centre for the Democratic Control of Armed Forces (DCAF).

Mark Wielga

Mr. Wielga is Director of Nomogaia, a non-profit think tank focused on business and human rights. He has over twenty years direct experience with human rights in action around the world. He has actively promoted a clear understanding of governmental and corporate duties toward human rights in his professional and academic activities. Mr. Wielga developed data-informed processes for human rights assessment and analysis and worked on extensive formal human rights assessments on corporate projects in Africa, Asia, the Middle East and Latin America. He has been a speaker and lecturer on Human Rights at World Bank and International Finance Corporation and has taught law school classes on the development and application of human rights in national and international contexts. He has interacted with National Human Rights Institutions worldwide on specific and institutional issues and taught select transnational business seminars on human rights issues. Mr. Wielga is a practicing attorney licensed in the United States with a specialty in international litigation and corporate social responsibility. He received this JD degree from the University of Chicago School of Law.

Edward H. Ziegler

Professor Edward Ziegler is a founder and past president of the Rocky Mountain Land Use Institute. He is the inaugural holder of the Robert B. Yegge Memorial Research Chair and Professor of Law at the University of Denver Sturm College of Law. He is a frequent speaker and noted scholar on zoning and urban planning law. Professor Ziegler has published in professional journals throughout the United States, Europe, Asia, and Latin America. His writings, which include the teaching casebook Land Use Regulation and the five-volume treatise Rathkopf's The Law of Zoning and Planning are widely cited in land use cases by state appellate courts as well as by the United States Supreme Court.