UNIVERSITY OF DENVER STURM COLLEGE OF LAW

2009 HONOR ROLL OF DONORS
Excellence. It’s a fundamental part of the mission of the University of Denver and the Sturm College of Law. It’s easy to aspire to excellence, but it’s a goal that takes commitment, dedication, energy—and financial resources—to achieve.

The administration, faculty and staff of the Sturm College of Law continue to work to achieve the full promise of this extraordinary institution. In the past year we have made significant strides toward providing the very best legal education to our students and our faculty continued their path-breaking scholarship.

Let me share just a few examples of our progress:

- Our new strategic plan includes a modern teaching initiative, designed to produce graduates who are more “practice ready.” The plan calls for more skills training, and more integrated, experiential learning opportunities for our students.
- Our entering class size has remained at 300, down from 379 just two years ago. At the same time, we are increasing the size of our tenure track faculty (from 52 to 62 over the next 5 years). This means smaller classes and lower student-teacher ratios, which makes for higher quality teaching.
- The quality of our entering classes has continued to improve. Our median LSAT scores and undergraduate GPA have continued to rise. And we have added a number of new scholarships designed to attract the best and brightest students.
- Our faculty continue to produce and present first-rate scholarship, published in prestigious venues, and recognized for its excellence by academics and practitioners alike.
- A record number of our programs have received national recognition: Environmental and Natural Resources Law, International Legal Studies, and Tax, as well as our clinical and Lawyering Process (legal writing) programs, were ranked among the very best in the country. Additionally, in the first ever U.S. News ranking of part-time programs, ours was ranked #9.
- Our bar passage initiatives are beginning to bear fruit. On the July 2009 bar, our graduates passed at a rate of 91%. And on the last two bar exams, our graduates passed at a rate higher than the state average.

All of these achievements were made possible by your generous support of the Sturm College of Law. I am grateful to all of our donors who allow us to continue on the path to excellence. All of us at the law school take your trust in us very seriously. I look forward to reporting future developments and successes to you.

Warm regards,

Martin J. Katz
Interim Dean & Professor of Law

UNIVERSITY OF DENVER

Sturm College of Law
DU Law- A History of Success

1893: Awarded the first J.D. degrees from a Colorado law school; 1893: Created first Natural Resources Law courses in the country, beginning with Irrigation and Water Rights in 1893; 1896: Graduated the first woman, Mary Lathrop, admitted to practice before the Colorado U.S. District Court and the U.S. Court of Appeals; 1904: Established the first legal clinic program in the U.S.; 1968: Established the first Counsel on Legal Education Opportunities (CLEO) program in the U.S.; 1970: Established the first and only Master of Science in Legal Administration (MSLA) program to train professional managers for court systems and law offices; 2002: One of the first institutions in the country to pioneer an immersion method of language and law and allowing students to participate in multicultural and cross-linguistic legal experiences; 2004: Opened the nation’s first LEED-certified “green” law school building.
July 2009 Bar Exam Results Boast Highest Pass Rate in Over 20 Years

Leaders at the University of Denver Sturm College of Law were beyond pleased when the initial results of the July 2009 Bar Exam passage rates were released in October.

And then, those results got better, moving higher when appeals of those who just missed passage were complete. In the final tally, released Nov. 17, DU’s passage rate hit 91 percent, the highest DU passage rate in modern times. The new passage rate is posted on the Colorado Supreme Court’s Web.

For a program that saw a passage rate dip below 60 percent just a few years ago in a February exam, the rate completes a turnaround that interim Dean Martin Katz believes is just the beginning.

“We’ve gotten good news followed by better news,” Katz says. “The entire faculty has taken the bar passage rate quite seriously and recognized that we wanted to do something about it. There is a renewed emphasis on taking steps to improve.”

In addition to the success of DU’s newest lawyers, the graduating class of 2009, the law school is relishing another dose of good news. The national magazine Super Lawyers’ newest law school rankings, issued this month, rank DU at number 53 in the country, and the highest ranked law school in Colorado.

Katz says the high ranking is gratifying because Super Lawyers rates what’s really important: how successful DU law graduates are in their careers after school.

“We’re doing something right,” Katz says.

Achieving the new high in bar passage didn’t come by accident, he says. Katz and the faculty have worked for two years on building the passage rate, both by boosting admission standards to admit only students who have the best chance of succeeding in law school and passing the bar, but also by creating an entire program dedicated to passage.

Lecturer Scott Johns is director of the DU Bar Success Program. He says that while students are challenged throughout their years to learn their craft, they are also provided with intensive counseling and bar passage programs after they walk across the stage and accept a diploma. Students are encouraged to devote the two months between graduation and the July bar exam to study and test preparation. Off campus, they are encouraged to avoid full-time work and dedicate themselves to study. And on campus, faculty conduct classes and lectures multiple times each week, followed by mock exams, writing assignments and personal coaching and reviews of student writing.

“A lot of it is building their confidence,” Johns says. “Students learn to think, ‘I can solve problems. I’ve got a good strategy for solving them and a good strategy for writing them down.’ The heart of the legal profession is writing, so we focus on analyzing problems and clear, legal writing.”

Katz says when passage rates dipped earlier this decade, it was time to reevaluate. The results of that evaluation are coming to fruition. “Overall, there’s a new focus on the bar both among our faculty and our students,” Katz says.”Quite frankly I think we got scared straight.”

Looking forward, Katz sees stronger and stronger classes that have met increasingly tough admission standards. He says the challenge is to build on this year’s bar success, but he’s confident the students will come through.

“The best is yet to come,” he says.

John Potter, LLB’61, got one heck of a bargain from Uncle Sam in exchange for his service to the military – a University of Denver LLB and MBA for $90!

Drafted into the Korean War, John served as a Private morse code radio operator stationed in Austria for close to a year. Upon discharge, he applied to the University of Denver College of Business. He was accepted and graduated in 1957, at which point he figured that he might as well keep his educational career going and applied to the College of Law. He was again accepted and enrolled in the night program for four years while working with Denver National Bank (now Wells Fargo) during the day.

In 1970, John left what was then United Bank for a position with Overseas Private Investment Corporation, a U.S. government corporation headquartered in Washington D.C. He only planned to be away from the Centennial State for three years – 39 years later he continues to reside on the east coast, but his heart remains in Colorado. For many years after leaving the state, and even during professional stints overseas, John continued to list Denver as his hometown. He frequently returns to Colorado to enjoy the mountains, golf and to “putz around” the Denver Country Club, where he remains a non-resident member.

John supports the Sturm College of Law because he knows his dollar has a tremendous impact on a school rising within the national ranks.

“I think the College of Law is a darn good school that gets better every year,” says John. “I like putting money back into Colorado.”

* Deceased
On May 15, 2008, the University of Denver Sturm College of Law lost one of its most unsung advocates and enduring benefactors, Richard D. Greengard, JD’70. Prior to his passing, Richard was a shareholder at Isaacson Rosenbaum, P.C., a premier business law firm in Denver and home to many DU Law graduates. He also spent many years of his legal career with Greengard, Senter, Goldfarb, and Rice, LLC. He was a gifted and highly respected trial lawyer whose practice focused primarily on civil litigation, dispute resolution, and real estate and transactional law.

Known as a straight shooter, Richard never played games or had a hidden agenda. Despite his impressive reputation and remarkable legal abilities, he was quiet, soft-spoken and above all, humble. He never dwelled on his accomplishments; instead, he simply worked hard for his clients and was responsive to their needs so that they would return to him again and again asking for advice.

Richard was very involved in his alma mater and his community. He served as an adjunct professor at DU Law and taught commercial real estate transactions, civil procedure and remedies. He received great satisfaction from teaching and mentoring young lawyers.

To honor Richard’s memory and to highlight his passion for legal education, the Temple Hoyne Buell Foundation (one of Greengard’s clients) has helped to establish the Richard D. Greengard Endowed Scholarship Fund. At the discretion of the dean, the scholarship is awarded to those students demonstrating academic merit or financial need, but ideally both. Students who are awarded a scholarship from the fund are designated as “Greengard Scholars.”

Prior to his passing, Richard was a shareholder at Isaacson Rosenbaum, P.C., a premier business law firm in Denver and home to many DU Law graduates. He also spent many years of his legal career with Greengard, Senter, Goldfarb, and Rice, LLC. He was a gifted and highly respected trial lawyer whose practice focused primarily on civil litigation, dispute resolution, and real estate and transactional law.

Known as a straight shooter, Richard never played games or had a hidden agenda. Despite his impressive reputation and remarkable legal abilities, he was quiet, soft-spoken and above all, humble. He never dwelled on his accomplishments; instead, he simply worked hard for his clients and was responsive to their needs so that they would return to him again and again asking for advice.

Richard was very involved in his alma mater and his community. He served as an adjunct professor at DU Law and taught commercial real estate transactions, civil procedure and remedies. He received great satisfaction from teaching and mentoring young lawyers.

To honor Richard’s memory and to highlight his passion for legal education, the Temple Hoyne Buell Foundation (one of Greengard’s clients) has helped to establish the Richard D. Greengard Endowed Scholarship Fund. At the discretion of the dean, the scholarship is awarded to those students demonstrating academic merit or financial need, but ideally both. Students who are awarded a scholarship from the fund are designated as “Greengard Scholars.”

Richard D. Greengard Endowed Scholarship Fund

On May 15, 2008, the University of Denver Sturm College of Law lost one of its most unsung advocates and enduring benefactors, Richard D. Greengard, JD’70. Prior to his passing, Richard was a shareholder at Isaacson Rosenbaum, P.C., a premier business law firm in Denver and home to many DU Law graduates. He also spent many years of his legal career with Greengard, Senter, Goldfarb, and Rice, LLC. He was a gifted and highly respected trial lawyer whose practice focused primarily on civil litigation, dispute resolution, and real estate and transactional law.

Known as a straight shooter, Richard never played games or had a hidden agenda. Despite his impressive reputation and remarkable legal abilities, he was quiet, soft-spoken and above all, humble. He never dwelled on his accomplishments; instead, he simply worked hard for his clients and was responsive to their needs so that they would return to him again and again asking for advice.

Richard was very involved in his alma mater and his community. He served as an adjunct professor at DU Law and taught commercial real estate transactions, civil procedure and remedies. He received great satisfaction from teaching and mentoring young lawyers.

To honor Richard’s memory and to highlight his passion for legal education, the Temple Hoyne Buell Foundation (one of Greengard’s clients) has helped to establish the Richard D. Greengard Endowed Scholarship Fund. At the discretion of the dean, the scholarship is awarded to those students demonstrating academic merit or financial need, but ideally both. Students who are awarded a scholarship from the fund are designated as "Greengard Scholars."

Cathlin Donnell was an accomplished Colorado lawyer who devoted much of her professional time and talent toward solving systemic social problems, particularly in relation to women and the justice system. Before losing a hard fought battle with breast cancer in 2004, Cathlin made a huge impact on the Colorado legal community. She was the founding partner of the Denver law firm of Donnell Davis & Salomon; a founding member of the Colorado Women’s Bar Association (CWBA); and the first female U.S. attorney in Colorado. She spearheaded CWBA’s early efforts to look at pay equity for women in law firms, co-chaired the Colorado Supreme Court’s Task Force on Gender Bias in the Courts and was an active member of the Colorado Supreme Court Committee on the Effective and Efficient Use of Juries.

The Donnell Initiative Fund will help the University of Denver Sturm College of Law expand the number of students supported by the Loan Repayment Assistance Program (LRAP) as well as increase the amount of support provided to those participants. LRAP assists graduating students who make the financially difficult decision to pursue a career in public interest law, and encourages committed students to accept lower-paying public interest jobs by providing forgivable loans to repay law school-related debt.

About the gift, Diana Poole, a good friend of Cathlin’s and president of the Donnell Initiative Fund, says, “During her lifetime, Cathlin was committed to making a difference, which she did time and again on nearly every issue to which she devoted her attention. In administering her foundation, we were hard-pressed to think of any more appropriate legacy, or any way to better magnify Cathlin’s impact in the world that enabling law school graduates similarly committed to social change and social justice to pursue professional opportunities where they, in turn, can make a difference.”

LRAP has proven to be both extremely popular and very competitive for anyone considering a public interest career. The gift from the Donnell Initiative Fund will help to expand this key program.

Maxine Kurtz, JD’62

Maxine Kurtz, JD’62, valued learning and intellectual achievement and was proud of her law degree from the University of Denver College of Law.

Maxine’s career dealt with a wide range of public policies at the local, state and federal government level. In 1947 at the young age of 23, Maxine became head of the Denver Planning Office, becoming the first woman to organize and direct the planning departments of a major American city. She pioneered the innovative Denver Model Cities Program, one of the first such programs in the country, and went on to become a leader in the emerging field of human resources.

Through her gift to DU Law, Maxine helped to create two endowed funds. A portion of these funds will be channeled into the Maxine Kurtz Endowed Fund in International Legal Studies, which supports the Ved Nanda Center for the Study of International Law at the Sturm College of Law. The remaining funds have been distributed to the Maxine Kurtz Endowed Fund for Strategic Leadership in Law, which provides support for strategic planning and other initiatives aimed at maximizing the long-term strength and leadership of the Sturm College of Law within the educational, professional and larger communities that it serves.
Class Giving

The Class Giving list includes all DU Law alumni who made a gift to the Sturm College of Law during Fiscal Year 2009 (July 1, 2008–June 30, 2009). If an alumnus/a has earned more than one degree from DU Law, the JD graduation year is used for his or her class listing.

For Holly Truhlar, giving to the University of Denver Sturm College of Law’s Clinical Programs was an investment in a community whose work she believes in wholeheartedly.

While working in the civil rights clinic with Professor Laura Rovner during her 2L year, Holly was impressed with the clinic’s ability to directly serve underrepresented populations. And though the work load was enormous, the opportunity to apply a real set of facts to legal problems in a teamwork setting was immensely rewarding.

“I saw firsthand how hard the clinical faculty and students work to bring fair legal representation to those in need,” says Holly. “When you find a community like that, you stay a part of that community.”

DU Law runs through Holly Truhlar’s veins—her parents Doris Truhlar, JD’80, and Robert Truhlar, JD’81, have been enthusiastic supporters of the school for decades. That exposure and emphasis on community involvement have inspired Holly when making many of her own choices. But far from living in their shadow, Holly is forging her own path and exploring her many passions.

“I believe in paying it forward and I believe in investing time and money into places where you find meaning,” says Holly. “The DU Student Law Office is one of those places for me.”
