The February 12-13 conference of our International Legal Studies Program on “Sustainable Development, Corporate Governance, and International Law,” held as the Midwest International Law Weekend of the American Branch of the International Law Association (ABILA), was one of the best we have ever held. In addition to our faculty, students and local practitioners, participants came from all over the country. Special thanks go to our colleagues Fred Cheever, KK DuVivier, Anita Halvorssen, Bruce Hutton (Daniels), Rock Pring, and Don Smith for their active participation in planning and as panel chairs, and the support team of Keri Grundstein, Levi Kendall (2L) and the officers of the International Law Society, as well as Ian Bird, President of the Nanda Center Board, and Board members Judge Sid Brooks, CBA President Chuck Turner, Katharine Nanda (JD ’81), and Nicole Salamander (JD ’08), Nanda Center coordinator. Featured speakers were Daniel M. Magraw, Jr., President of the Center for International Environmental Law in Washington, who gave the Henry and Mary Bryan Lecture; Professor David Caron of the University of California Berkeley Law School and President-Elect of the American Society of International Law, who was the Myres McDougal Distinguished Lecturer, and Professor John Dernbach of Widener Law School, the luncheon speaker. Special guests also included ABILA President Prof. John Noyes and Chair of ABILA’s Board, Professor James A.R. Nafziger; and Sherry Broder, Esq., first woman President of the Hawaii Bar Association. Speakers came from around the country, especially the region -- including the University of Colorado (Lakshman Guruswamy, Nicholas Doman Professor), and faculty colleagues from Montana and South Dakota.
