Alumni Fund Hits New Record: $250,581 Contributed in '85-'86

Alumni Fund chairman John Low, left, presents check representing contributions to the 1985-86 Law Alumni Fund to Dean Edward A. Dauer.

Alumni Fund was devoted to a new program of Law Alumni Scholarships—financial awards to students with superlative professional promise in addition to financial need.

The availability of these merit-based awards had a significant impact on acceptances among higher qualified applicants for enrollment this fall.

As one award recipient responded: "This award reflects the continuing effort of the alumni of the College of Law to ensure the highest quality and degree of education to all graduates entering our profession. To all the donors who have so generously contributed to the Fund, I wish to extend my personal thanks."

Not only did the number of participants increase but membership in the various level giving clubs also increased. There were 62 donors at The Chancellors' Society level ($1,000-$10,000+); 53 earned Law School Patron recognition ($500-$999); 68 gave at the Scholarship Committee level ($250-$499); and 354 alumni earned 1864 Club membership ($125-$249). The average gift was nearly $200.

Campus Busy With Alumni Day and Commencement

Alumni Day 1986 and spring commencement combined to make a busy weekend on the College of Law campus June 6-7.

Nearly 300 alumni participated in the various Alumni Day events. Around 1,600 persons attended the commencement ceremonies during which over 200 graduates received law and graduate tax degrees.

Highlights of Alumni Day June 6 included the semi-annual meeting of the Law Alumni Council; Coffee with the Deans; a professional education program on "Personal Morality and Ethical Responsibility—A Dilemma?" which included workshops on common ethical problems. Keynote of the program was a presentation by Professor Stephen S. Pepper.

A reception and dinner enabled members of the 1986 Reunion Classes (those years ending in one and six) and other alumni to renew acquaintances.

During the dinner program, chaired by Richard A. Dudder, JD '64, chairman of the Law Alumni Council, the Law Alumni Award was presented to the Honorable Robert H. McWilliams, Jr., LLB '41, senior judge, United States Court of Appeals, Tenth Circuit. The presentation was made by Paul D. Renner, LLB '52, a longtime friend of Judge McWilliams and a former chairman of the Law Alumni Council.

Dean Edward A. Dauer gave special recognition to alumni members of the judiciary. Alumni records indicate there are over 175 DU law graduates serving in federal, state and county courts throughout the country.

Guest speaker at the dinner was the Honorable Anthony F. Vollack, JD '56, justice of the Supreme Court of Colorado.

The outdoor amphitheatre adjoining Whatley Chapel provided an ideal setting for the commencement exercises June 7.

Degrees were conferred upon graduates by Chancellor Dwight M. Smith. Edward W. Estlow, chairman of the DU board of trustees, offered the University welcome.
More About Law Alumni Fund —

Low will again chair the Law Alumni Fund campaign in 1986-87, Dean Dauer has announced. James C. Owen, Jr., '56, will serve as vice chairman.

Goals for the upcoming year are $275,000 in funds and 27.5 percent participation. Scholarship support continues to be the top priority.

Emphasis will again be placed on personal contacts and telefunds which will be held in November and December. "We exceeded our goal last year because more alumni participated than ever before," Low pointed out. "The equation is simple: greater participation and financial support equal continuing success for our Law School."

Members of the 1986-87 Law Alumni Fund Committee have been named; agents for the Reunion Classes have again been included. The Committee includes:

Members-at-large: T. Michael Carington, '69; Kenneth Farabee, '70; Theodore Z. Gelt, '75; George C. Gibson, '55; Glen E. Keller, Jr., '64; Patrick F. Kenney, '68; Donald E. LaMora, '50; Ruth C. Malman, '78.

City of Denver Buys Former DU Law School

University of Denver officials have announced the sale of the former downtown College of Law facilities to the city of Denver for $5.9 million. The sale includes the Law Center and Forum buildings but excludes six parking lots at 13th and Bannock. The city plans to renovate the buildings for use as offices.

Chancellor Dwight M. Smith pointed out that the law school property was used as collateral for loans used to purchase the Colorado Women's College campus which now houses the College of Law.

According to Elizabeth Williams, DU vice chancellor for business and financial affairs, the sale price "is the present market value of the property." She said the proceeds of the sale will allow DU to make payment on the principal amount borrowed to acquire the CWC campus, and build the new law school, as the original acquisition plan had required. The result will be a reduction in costs related to that debt and will also eliminate annual operation and maintenance costs of an estimated $70,000 for the former law facilities.

Under terms of the agreement, the city of Denver will pay for the building in three installments, beginning with a $2.9 million installment at the closing in early 1987, a $2 million payment on the same date in 1988 and a final payment of $1 million in 1989.

Smith indicated the sale is one of several financial moves made by the University in the last few months which have enhanced DU's finances.

RM Mineral Law Foundation Moves to DU Law Campus

The Rocky Mountain Mineral Law Foundation, which has been located at the University of Colorado School of Law since 1955, has relocated its offices to the University of Denver College of Law.

Because the Foundation's present and future space needs exceeded what the CU-Boulder campus could provide, Foundation officials undertook an extensive search for adequate facilities, both within Colorado and outside the state. This search culminated in the decision to move to the DU law campus.

CU Law Dean Betsy Levin expressed great regret that CU was unable to provide the space required by the Foundation. However, Dean Levin and DU Law Dean Edward A.
