To the Alumni,
College of Law

Like the proverbial "bad penny," I've turned up again. I recall with fondness my many contacts with alumni during my 1984-85 role as Acting Dean and look forward to renewing old acquaintances and making new friends.

In private education at all levels, alumni play a special and increasingly important role. This is especially true in legal education, where the demands for excellent professional performance require that you who possess the wisdom and knowledge gained from daily practice, help ensure that those of us responsible for education and training in law bring a genuine sense of reality to the task. We need and encourage your advice and cooperation.

Apart from contacts at scheduled events, I welcome your suggestions for the continued improvement and advancement of the College of Law.

William M. Beaney
Acting Dean

Dauer Resigns Dean's Post
Beaney Named Acting Dean as National Search Gets Underway

A national search has begun to select the twelfth dean of the University of Denver College of Law.

The position became vacant when Edward A. Dauer announced on June 16 that he would step down from the deanship effective June 30, 1990, but remain as a member of the faculty.

Subsequently, on August 1, Dauer announced that he had requested of the University, and had been granted, a research leave of absence during the fifth and final year of his term as dean.

On August 10, Professor Emeritus William M. Beaney was named Acting Dean of the College of Law by University Provost John F. Jones. Beaney retired last May after serving on the full-time faculty since 1969. He also served as Acting Dean in 1984-85, between the terms of Deans Daniel S. Hoffman and Dauer.

Dauer noted in his resignation message to the College of Law community that when he came to DU in July 1985, he believed it was better that his appointment be for a stated period of time and that he would limit his appointment to "the more usual five-year period."

"There are several reasons for preferring such a limitation, all of them having to do with the good of the College of Law and therefore of the University," Dauer's announcement stated. "Those considerations are as valid now as they were then. I shall accordingly neither seek nor accept an extension of my appointment beyond the five year period . . . "

Dauer came to DU after serving on the Yale Law School faculty and administrative staff for 11 years.

In announcing Beaney's appointment, Jones praised Beaney's long commitment to the University and the legal community. "He has served in this role before. He knows the requirements of the position, has the support of the faculty and will be an ideal person to help the new dean once an appointment has been made."

Beaney's selection was based on a recommendation from a law faculty committee, Jones said. A search committee for a new dean has been appointed and a selection will be made in the coming year.

Greenspahn Will Serve as Law Business Dean

Barbara N. Greenspahn, Director of Law Libraries and Associate Professor of Law Library Science, has assumed for one year the additional duties of Associate Dean for Business and Financial Affairs at the College of Law effective September 1.

She succeeds Professor Edward J. Roche, Jr., who has completed an agreed one-year appointment to the post. Professor Roche will begin a research sabbatical, delayed a year to serve in the law school administration.

Acting Dean William M. Beaney said Greenspahn will continue to oversee the operations of the Westminster Law Library.
From the Dean:

In the late spring of 1985 we at the College of Law, with the support of the DU administration, committed ourselves to a five-year plan of substantial new investments in the programs and personnel of the College. Our new physical facilities—then and now among the best in the nation—had by that time already been secured, through the generosity of our alumni and friends and with the vision and guidance of Daniel Hoffman, my predecessor in the Dean’s Office. It was therefore our plan, for the period from 1985 to 1990, to address the further development of what was in those wonderful new buildings—our curricular programs, our faculty and students, and the Westminster Law Library.

The chief targets of that plan were the Library, which is now budgeted at roughly twice its 1985 level; the faculty, which as of this year has had six new full-time positions added; the student body, smaller by design now than it was then by nearly 100 people, and with entering credentials improved every year over the year before; and, as a result of these, a student-to-faculty ratio reduced from what was then over 31 to 1, to what is now in the middle 20’s and heading lower. Student financial aid, though it has not yet reached the levels where it needs be, is also nearly twice what it was in 1985, due in large part to your support of the Annual Fund—an effort entirely devoted to scholarships, and now running at over 350% of what it was in 1984. Those were some of our major targets, in each case achieved nearly as we had planned.

The plan had other components too, such as enhancements in alumni service and professional involvement, clinical innovation, improvements in campus-based student services, and so on. This, however, is not meant to be a vainglorious Annual Report, nor even a summary accounting of where we’ve had our successes and where we still need to have them. It is, rather, only a confession of astonishment: As difficult as it is to believe, the annual report of that plan is here. In a few short months those five years will have passed. Zip, just like that.

I hope that you will indulge me in some personal thoughts on this occasion, for as I confirmed in June, this is my own fifth and final year as well.

When I assumed the office of Dean in July 1985, it was, at my instance, on the express understanding that my term would not go beyond five years—ending, that is, in June of 1990, about nine months from now. (Even that period was ambitious. According to the popular press, the median longevity of law school deans today is less than three and a half years!) Having such a limit was an idea rooted in a number of considerations; its parallel with the College of Law’s five-year development plan was intentional and, I am pleased to add, it turned out to be personally meaningful.

As we begin this important fifth year, with a dean search beginning and with the implementation of the last pieces of that plan underway, we can look back with some satisfaction—and with great thanks to you, our alumni—at what has been accomplished in that time. Through the support of the University and the encouragement of our many friends, the DU law school today is, so far as anyone can measure it, a widely known and highly respected factor in American legal education. It is at least as well positioned as it has ever been to attract to its campus the very best of students and faculty, and—as we begin now to focus upon it—a new dean. There is still much to be done, but much has already been done. For which my sincere thought and single best word is, once again, a simple but heartfelt Thanks! I have taught or administered for various terms at six law schools over the past twenty-one years. (If we add one other which I attended as a student, the number that I have seen up close and personal would be seven.) As a member of ABA inspection teams I have come to know well many more. Not one of them enjoys the benefits of a close and warm relationship between a school of law and its surrounding profession nearly as much as DU does. Of that I am quite certain. When we asked for your counsel, you gave it freely. Of your support you gave generously. When we took a new direction here or there, you gave us candor and encouragement and great good faith. And to me personally you have offered a friendship as sincere as any I have known.

The University has granted me a research leave during the coming academic year, which I will devote to the pursuit of a number of academic and professional projects here in Denver before taking my place on the DU teaching faculty in the autumn of 1990. I begin this leave with every confidence in the success of our mission, and that is again due in no small part to you. For while our collective achievements are built on the individual achievements of our faculty and our students and our staff, we reach our fullest potential, as a school with a very special place in the profession that it serves, only with the counsel and encouragement that you continue to provide. For that I say again, for me and on behalf of all of us Thanks! And I’ll be seeing you.

Newly Created Position
Hernandez Named Dean of Students

Rufina A. Hernandez was named to the newly created position of Assistant Dean for Student Affairs at the College of Law, effective July 1, 1989.

Hernandez has served as attorney and senior attorney with the Legal Aid Society of Metropolitan Denver, Inc., since her graduation from Georgetown University Law Center in 1982. She earned a B.A. degree from the University of New Mexico, Albuquerque, in 1977.

At Legal Aid, Hernandez’ emphasis was on consumer protection litigation involving consumer contracts, debtor-creditor relations, bankruptcy and utility issues.

She has served as a member of the Colorado, Inc. The last two years she served as Assistant Dean for Continuing Education and Professional Affairs.

Barber served as director of public relations and new programming at Gove Community School, Denver, from 1985-88. A graduate of Cornell University, she also has worked for the Colorado Democratic Party, the Governor’s Council of Consumer Credit Advisors and on advisory boards to the Supreme Court Rules Committee, the Battered Women’s Shelter, and Auraria Community College. In addition, Hernandez is a member of the Colorado Women’s Bar Association and a member of the Board of Directors of the Hispanic Bar Association.

For several years Hernandez has been a volunteer trainer in the law school’s Student Law Office, specializing in consumer and domestic law.

In her new post at DU, her responsibilities will include general counseling for students, academic mentoring, assistance in a summer preparatory program for students, the early identification and education support of students in need of academic assistance, and general liaison to student organizations.

Four Professional Staff Appointments Announced

Professional staff appointments have brought several newcomers to the College of Law community in recent months.

J. Pennewell Post joined the staff last November and is managing the personnel, budget and payroll functions at the law school. She filled a vacancy created by the resignation of Nancy Elofson, who joined the staff at Holme Roberts & Owen, Denver. Elofson had served at the law school since February 1979, the last two years as business manager.

Post, a graduate of Western Montana State University, has 20 years experience in banking, including involvement with the start-up of the Private Bank, at the First Interstate Bank, Denver.

Susan Ewing Barber, program and publications coordinator of the law school’s Institute for Advanced Legal Studies (IALS) since January 1, has been named director of IALS. She has assumed some functions formerly directed by Assistant Dean Mark S. Caldwell, JD’76.

Caldwell left the College of Law staff this summer and has started his own business consulting in adult education. He had served on the law school staff since 1977 and from 1982-87 directed the College’s Program of Advanced Professional Development and Continuing Legal Education in Colorado, Inc. The last two years he served as Assistant Dean for Continuing Education and Professional Affairs.

Barber served as director of public relations and new programming at Gove Community School, Denver, from 1985-88. A graduate of Cornell University, she also has worked for the Colorado Democratic Party, the Rita D. Zaslowsky, a management and hiring consultant to Denver’s legal community, assumed duties as director of placement July 5. She succeeds Linda K. Bougie who resigned in May to return to her private career counseling/consulting practice. A graduate of the University of Illinois, Zaslowsky has filled human resources positions at Holland & Hart and Touche Ross Co. in Denver.

Sally Maresh has joined the law school staff as administrator of the College’s Lawyering Skills Program, succeeding longtime staff member Lora Coven. Coven had recently moved to a position as coordinator of programs and publications, IALS, but later resigned to accept a position at Holme Roberts & Owen. A majority of Coven’s more than 19 years service at the law school was served in the Advocacy Skills Program/Student Law Office.

Maresh served as legal services coordinator with the Denver Bar Association from 1981-88, including a year as director of the Thursday Night Bar Program. She previously served in the Denver city attorney’s office as supervisor of paralegals. Maresh holds bachelor and master degrees from the University of Northern Colorado.

Virginia E. Olsen, who served at the College of Law in a variety of duties from 1980, resigned last December to pursue other interests.
Owen Elected Chair Law Alumni Council

James C. Owen Jr., LLB’56, a partner at Holme Roberts & Owen, Denver, was elected chairman of the DU Law Alumni Council for 1989-90 during the group’s July 8 meeting held at the College of Law. He succeeds William T. Diss, JD’59, Denver, who had served in the post the last two years.

The new chairman has served on the Council for three years, the last two as vice chairman. Owen served as co-chairman of the 1988-89 Law Alumni Fund (see story elsewhere). He is a director of United Bank of Denver National Association and of its parent, United Banks of Colorado, Inc. He is a past chairman of the Lawyers’ Committee, Association of Bank Holding Companies, and of the Banking Committee of the Corporation, Banking and Business Law Section of the Colorado Bar Association.

Connie B. Hyde, JD’81, was elected to succeed Owen as vice chairman. She had served as Council secretary the past two years. Ted Allegro, JD’81, was named the new secretary. Hyde is a partner at Gorsuch, Kirgis, Campbell, Walker & Grover, Denver, while Allegro is a partner with the Grand Junction firm of Nelson, Hoskin, Groves & Prinster.

Five persons are new members of the Council. They include: Group I (graduates of more than 40 years previous); Richard H. Simon, JD’36, Englewood, Colorado; Group II (graduates of less than 40 years but more than 10 years); Robert S. Treece, JD’58, Denver; Bill J. Zimmerman, JD’64, Dallas, Texas; and Marilyn Alkire Shea, JD’77, Denver; Group III (graduates of 10 years or less); Leslie A. Nichols, JD’87, Denver.

In Group IV (a member of the two most recent graduating classes), Patricia Dean, JD’88, Denver, will serve for a one-year term, and Theresa A. Roche, JD’89, Boulder, will serve a two-year term.

Re-elected to second three-year terms on the Council were Larry Sigman, JD’83, Denver, Hyde, Group II, and Owen, Group II.

Completing Council terms were: Group I, Thomas A. Nevin, JD’40, Aurora, Colorado; Group II, Mary T. Hoagland, JD’75, Daniel E. Muse, JD’71, and Stanton D. Rosenbaum, LLB’53, all of Denver; Group IV, C. Forrest Morgan, JD’87, Denver.

Professors Beaney, Blumenthal

Longtime Faculty Members Retire

The retirement of two longtime faculty members was noted during a College of Law family dinner last May. Honored were Professors William M. Beaney and Murray Blumenthal, who joined the law faculty only a year apart, 1969 and 1970, respectively.

Beaney, one of the nation’s leading authorities on constitutional law, taught at Princeton from 1949-68 where he also chaired the department of politics. He was serving as William Nelson Cromwell Professor of Law at Princeton before accepting an appointment at DU.

Beaney holds a bachelor’s degree from Harvard and earned law and doctorate degrees at the University of Michigan, where he served as a teaching fellow. He is the author and co-author of textbooks used in law schools around the nation.

Beaney’s plans to travel and take life easy and teach one course at the law school this fall have already been interrupted (see page one).

He succeeded Dr. Thompson G. Marsh as the Charles W. Delaney, Jr., Professor of Law in 1988.

Blumenthal, like Beaney, served a year as a visiting professor at the DU law school before joining the fulltime faculty. A person of varied accomplishments, he earned a doctorate in general experimental psychology from DU in 1959. He also holds bachelor and masters degrees from DU.

Blumenthal began his pursuit of higher education at the Juilliard School of Music. He later played professionally with the Dallas and Denver Symphony orchestras. At the law school he helped formulate and later directed the Master of Science in Law & Society degree program.

Blumenthal also taught at several other schools and served in posts with the National Safety Council and The Travelers Research Center, Inc. At the law school he taught negotiation, legal counseling and mediation.

In retirement he’s already become involved in civic affairs of Georgetown, Colorado, where he lives. He also plans to spend more time with his family, music and his hobby of photography.

Both Beaney and Blumenthal have been honored with designation as Professor Emeritus.

Over The Goal!

That was the cheer of Law Alumni Fund leaders as they reported contributions to the 1988-89 annual campaign reached $353,181.56, a new record high. The goal was $350,000.

James C. Owen, Jr., LLB’56, and Glen E. Keller, Jr., JD’64, served as Fund co-chairmen.

The results marked the fourth consecutive year the Law Alumni Fund has exceeded its goal. In that four-year period alumni giving has shown an impressive 182% increase.

University Confers Honorary Degrees on Two Law Grads

Honorary degrees were conferred upon College of Law graduates Leonard v.B. Sutton, JD'41, and Thomas N. Jordan, LLB '59, during University and College of Law spring commencements. Both men have long been interested in, and supportive of, the affairs of the law school and the University.

Jordan, a former Denver oilman, is president of the Jordan Vineyard and Winery near Santa Rosa, California, whose production of fine wines is widely recognized by the industry.

Sutton was honored with a Doctor of Laws degree at the law school's June 3 commencement. The University conferred a Doctor of Science degree upon Jordan on May 30.

The Hon. Jim R. Carrigan, U.S. District Court judge, Colorado, was the guest speaker at the College of Law graduation. Dean Edward A. Dauer presided at the ceremony.

Juris Doctor degrees were conferred upon about 225 candidates by Chancellor Dwight M. Smith. Graduates Ann C. McCullough and Carolyn Q. Tillery both spoke, representing the evening and day divisions, respectively.

Available to Law Alumni

College of Law alumni may call a 24-hour Job Hotline to hear a taped message providing current employment opportunities of interest to graduates.

Rita Zaslowsky, placement director, said the job message is updated weekly on Friday afternoons. In the interest of maintaining confidentiality, alumni are asked to contact the placement office in writing to obtain the Hotline number. Address requests to Placement Office, University of Denver College of Law, 7039 East 18th Avenue, Denver, CO 80220.

Alumni are also invited to contact the placement office at 303-871-6124 for details about employment opportunities noted on the taped message.

Zaslowsky also urged those who are interested in hiring an attorney or student clerk to contact the placement office for assistance with recruiting efforts.
