OOPS!!!
On page 9 of the last Alumni Newsletter we identified the woman in the photo with Dale Helm, LLB'60, as Sheila Gutterman, JD'87. This was actually Jean Pirok. Sheila was not there as she was too busy planning this year's Barrister's Ball and receiving the Volunteer Lawyer of the Year Award. Sorry for any confusion we caused.

Also, on p.27, we incorrectly identified Professor Ved Nanda as professor emeritus. He is distinguished, brilliant, popular, hardworking, loved, but not Emeritus. Sorry Professor Nanda.

35 In Memoriam
At the close of another successful academic year, it is very rewarding for me to look back on the varied accomplishments of our students. We have a great deal to be proud of and to recognize! As alumni, your contributions to student achievements take equally varied forms. You serve as judges in the competitions, Senior Partners in the Lawyering Process program, contributors to the many scholarship funds, supervising of lawyers for internship experiences for our students, and as adjunct faculty in our classrooms. All of these contributions create a synergy between our alumni and students that is a vital part of the College of Law experience.

Let me mention just a few of the many things our students are involved in and have achieved recently. As you will read about in more detail in this newsletter, our Chancellor’s Scholars organized and presented an important city-wide program on the complex issue of youth and violence. Forging connections between the College of Law and the community on important issues of public interest is a high priority for us. We are enormously proud of the leadership role that our Chancellor’s Scholars have taken in achieving that goal with this successful and important conference.

Our students also spend a significant portion of their time in a variety of public service activities. Whether it is recycling, tutoring elementary school students, assisting needy families at Thanksgiving, or raising awareness about people with disabilities, many of our law students reach out to the community on their own or through the activities of our more than forty student organizations.

Our faculty, too, are very involved in the community. The Women and the Law Conference that you will read about in this issue is but one example. Another is the creation of the Volunteer Income Tax Assistance program where law and graduate tax students provide income tax assistance to indigent clients.

I hope you share my pride in what our students accomplish through volunteer activities and recognize the significant role that you, as alumni, play in helping students achieve their goals as new members of our profession.

Dean Dennis O. Lynch
IT'S YOUR TURN

We received a letter from Joseph G. Hodges Jr., a member of the Chancellor’s Society, regarding Pat Westfeldt’s recollections of Stephen Hart in the last issue of the Newsletter. Mr. Hodges wishes to set the record straight. His letter to Mr. Westfeldt is reprinted in part as follows:

...I came to recently read with much interest and pleasure your very nice article about Stephen H. Hart, Esq., who was, at least in my professional opinion, one of the great (and few remaining) “general practitioners” of the Colorado Bar. My interest in this article was even more so because I grew up with, and still maintain some ongoing contacts with his three children...

I do, however, need to set the historical record straight before past legends about current and former members of the Colorado Arlberg Club, of which I also am a member and a past president, somehow become historical reality.

I suppose I can forgive the slip on page 20 of that article to the effect that the Georgetown Loop Railroad runs “between Georgetown and Silverton” (emphasis added), as we all know that this particular railway line never went much further west beyond “Silver Plume”...

However, I must take issue with the caption for the picture of Steve Hart that is on that same page 20. This caption reads “Steve smiles after a day of cross country skiing at the old Arlberg Club in Winter Park. Rather, it is at the highlands Bavarian Lodge near Ashcroft, Colorado, just outside of Aspen. Moreover, it is doubtful that Mr. Hart spent the day cross country skiing there, except to the extent that he might have had to walk uphill in order to be able to then ski downhill, as there were no ski lifts in Ashcroft in those days (nor are there any these days). The exact date of that particular picture was sometime on New Year’s Eve day in 1937, and Steve was not there alone. Rather, he had lots of company that day. Many of these people were also charter members of the Colorado Arlberg Club.

I trust you will understand and appreciate my desire to “set the record straight” in this regard, and I hope you find these additional tidbits of true history both informative and entertaining.

Very truly yours,
Joseph G. Hodges Jr.
Leaders Provide Strong Pool of Adjunct Faculty

Denver has historically been a natural resources center in mining, oil and gas, and water. As a result, many of the finest natural resource and environmental lawyers in the country reside here in Colorado. Traditionally, these leaders have shared their knowledge and experience as, adjuncts and part-time faculty at the College of Law.

The seminar offered by the Amax Foundation is extremely popular. Every year nearly 100 law students petition to be admitted and only fifteen are selected. Graduates of the seminar now hold positions in leading law firms, corporations and the Interior or Justice Departments. The list of Amax Practitioners-in-Residence is impressive. It includes Denver’s leading natural resource attorneys: Don Sherwood and Randy Parcel, Mauro Hultin & Spaanstra, PC; Steve Alfers, Morrison & Foerster; Chuck Kaiser, Davis Graham & Stubbs; Laura Lindley, JD’80, and Peter Bjork, Bjork Seavy Lindley & Danielson, PC; and David Ebner, Lohf Shaiman & Jacobs, PC.

The Rocky Mountain Mineral Law Foundation was organized in 1955 as a non-profit Colorado corporation, dedicated to the study of the legal system and issues affecting natural resources. The Foundation is a cooperative project of law schools, bar associations, and industry associations. The University of Denver College of Law has been one of the governing law schools of the Foundation since its creation. The Foundation is located on the law school campus, and has developed a solid partnership with the school. The late Professor Thompson Marsh was a founding trustee from 1955-58; subsequent trustees were the late Roscoe Walker Jr., Robert Yegge, MA'58, JD'59, Thomas Brightwell, Professor Emeritus, John Carver, Phil Dufford, and most recently Professor Jan Laitos, 1982-present, who also is the current director of the College of Law's Natural Resources program. Foundation presidents who have served as faculty, adjunct or part-time faculty members include Clyde Martz, the late Roscoe Walker Jr., David Phipps, Ken Barnhill Jr., Don Sherwood, Robert Poulson, Tom Brightwell, Ken Hubbard, Randall Case, JD’73, Phil Dufford, Brooke Wunnicke, and Randy Parcel.

The Foundation sponsors institutes, short courses, and workshops. It also publishes numerous articles and books written by College of Law faculty. The Foundation has made grants available to our faculty for research to the Natural Resources Society, and the natural resources moot court competitions, and has provided start-up money for the Water Court Reporter, a student publication. In 1979, in memory of Joe Rudd, the Foundation established the Joe Rudd Scholarship Fund to encourage the study of natural resources law by students with the potential to make significant contributions to the field. Although the Joe Rudd Scholarships are awarded to students from schools throughout the Rocky Mountain region, DU law students have received 10 of the 41 scholarships awarded.

Numerous DU College of Law alumni have actively participated in the Rocky Mountain Mineral Law Foundation. The College of Law is proud to salute the valuable partnership created between the leaders of the Rocky Mountain Mineral Law Foundation who have become adjunct, part-time faculty, or Practitioners-in-Residence at the College of Law.
THE MARTIN P. MILLER LECTURE

Judge Jim R. Carriigan, of the United States District Court, was the featured speaker at the Martin P. Miller Lecture series at the College of Law in February and March. He spoke on current issues of concern to federal judges focusing on the increase in criminal cases as a portion of the District Courts’ caseload, controversy about the legitimacy of punitive damages, and the admissibility of scientific expert testimony in the wake of the 1993 U.S. Supreme Court decision in Daubert v. Merrell-Dow Pharmaceuticals.

Judge Carriigan joins the Miller family for lunch. (L-R) Kathryn Miller, JD’80, Edythe and Martin Miller, JD’31.

THE JOHN A. CARVER JR. LECTURE

Professor Emeritus John A. Carver Jr., and Governor Andrus talk before the lecture.

Governor Cecil D. Andrus addresses over 450 attendees on the issue of “Facing Down the Genie: One State’s Efforts to Deal with the Nuclear Waste Dilema.”

Professor Jan Laitos, Governor Andrus, Professors John Carver, Rock Pring and Fred Cheever from the College of Law’s Natural Resource Program at the reception following the lecture.

During the spring, several noted lecturers spoke at the College of Law to students, faculty, alumni, and friends on topics as diverse as individual privacy, the international environment and current issues concerning federal judges. These noted local and national speakers greatly enrich the educational opportunities available to students and the Denver legal community.
ROBERT S. APPEL LECTURE

The 1994 Robert S. Appel Distinguished Lecture in Law and Technology featured guest lecturer Gary T. Marx, professor and chair of the Sociology Department at the University of Colorado at Boulder. He is also the director of the Center for the Social Study of Information and Technology.

Marx, one of the leading authorities on technology and issues of privacy, spoke on "The Abuses of Technology for the Collection of Personal Information: What's the Problem and What's to Be Done."

The annual lecture series was created in honor of College of Law graduate Robert S. Appel, LLB '52, and is supported by a law school fund established in 1987 by the Denver law firm of Rothgerber, Appel, Powers & Johnson. Bob was missed this year as he was ill and unable to attend the presentation held on March 9th.

SUTTON COLLOQUIUM

"The Road From Rio...The Environment After The Earth Summit", March 25, 1994

Hon. Leonard v.B. Sutton, JD '41, a longstanding supporter of the international legal studies program, opens the 1994 Sutton Colloquium.

Gunther Handl, Professor of Law, Wayne State University, addresses the audience on the status of the international environment since the Earth Summit in Rio.

SCHOLARS PRESENT COMMUNITY PROGRAM

Congratulations to Chancellor’s Scholars Suzie Trinh, Richard Losh, Marie Avery, Megan Simpson, Ann England, Lytia Brown, and Professor Borison for their successful presentation of the day-long program entitled "Community Under Fire: Our Summit on Youth and Violence" held on April 9, 1999.

The students began planning this program last October during weekly meetings with Professor Borison.

Chancellor Ritchie opened the program for the 90-plus attendees addressing the importance of community connection. The audience represented diverse backgrounds including academia, state agencies, community organizations, high school students, juvenile service providers, law enforcement personnel and others. All listened as Professor Marcelina Rivera (Adjunct Professor, College of Law) led a panel of experts through the topic of “Community and the Responses to Youth Violence.”

Lunch was followed by a vigorous question and answer format as Senator Wells-Mendez, Representative Jeanne Adkins, Jim Joy (Executive Director, Colorado ACLU), Judge David Ramirez, Denver DA Bill Ritter, Cynthia Camp (Deputy State PD), Officer Tracie Harrison, and Deputy Chief Miriam Reed responded to a fact pattern developed by the program planning committee. The day ended with small group discussions and a reception.

Thanks to these Chancellor’s Scholars and Professor Borison for demonstrating that the College of Law is indeed the place “where the ivory tower meets the streets.”

College of Law Hosts SECOND ANNUAL WOMEN & LAW CONFERENCE

The College of Law hosted the Second Annual Women & Law Conference on April 20. This year’s topic was “Prosperity, Parity, or Poverty: The Relationship Between the Legal System and Women’s Economic Status.” The program provided an opportunity for those attending to gather and discuss case law, new legislation and theoretical structures focusing on women’s economic status and the way in which it intersects with the legal system. Topics included divorce settlements, financial planning, sexual harassment, workers’ compensation law, special-legal rules versus gender-blind rules, and welfare reform and intra-gender conflict.

Sponsors of the program included the Colorado Women’s Bar Association, Sam Cary Bar Association, The Women’s College-University of Denver, the Colorado Hispanic Bar Association and Davis & Weinstein. Congratulations to the planning committee for putting together an outstanding conference.
Thanks to the extraordinary efforts of the 15-member Advisory Board, the Elder Law Institute has been created. Educational programming was launched in the Fall of ’92 with the presentation of a six-week course entitled “The Elder Law Practice: Health and Long Term Care Planning, Abuse Issues and Ethics.” Attendance exceeded expectations.

Expectations were again exceeded in the Spring of ‘93 with the presentation of a day-long program, “Advising the Elderly and Disabled: What You Need to Know.” This interdisciplinary program for para-professionals, social workers, hospital discharge planners and case managers drew a crowd of 250 individuals. Congratulations to Susan Haines, JD’84, for organizing this much needed program.

The mission of the Elder Law Institute is to enhance the understanding of legal and other issues facing the elderly and disabled. Co-chair’s Probate Magistrate Sandra Franklin and Probate Magistrate E. David Griffith, JD’69, have led the Advisory Board through these first and formative years. Projects and ideas discussed include:

- presentation of advanced elder law symposium
- development of multi-disciplinary programs
- educating the public in regard to resources, alternatives, scams, medicaid recoveries, and medical directives
- exploration of collaborative opportunities with other organizations including the National Association of Elder Law Attorneys and the CBA Elder Law Committee
- development of guardianship training
- research/planning for the future (health care reform, abuse, ethical issues-bioethics, housing for the elderly and death with compassion)

The Board is pleased to announce that it will present a two-day Advanced Elder Law Institute on September 22-23, 1994. (Mark your calendars!) Attorney Baird Brown is spearheading this effort. Program faculty will consist of national experts from Colorado and beyond. Topics will include defense of the senior’s autonomy, defense of the trust, taxation issues, capacity standards, dying at home and others.

The College of Law wishes to thank the members of the Advisory Board for their time, wisdom, dedication and support. If you are interested in the activities of the Elder Law Institute or wish more information about upcoming programs, please contact Susan Ewing Barber, director, Institute for Advanced Legal Studies (303) 871-6118.
Nationally distinguished speakers at the general sessions included keynote speaker, Professor Douglas Kmiec, University of Notre Dame Law School, whose presentation on the case Dolan v. City of Tigard, now pending before the U.S. Supreme Court, will be published in the University of Denver Law Review, and Professor Fred Bosselman, IIT Kent School of Law, Chicago, whose presentation addressed issues related to wildlife habitat protection.

Colorado Governor Roy Romer, speaking on "Land Conservation in the West," opened The Rocky Mountain Land Use Institute's Third Annual Conference at the College of Law. The two-day conference, held March 10-11, focused on public interest and educational issues related to land use and development.

This year's conference attracted over 400 participants including academics, attorneys, planners, developers, realtors, and public officials from the Rocky Mountain region and beyond. In addition to participants from Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Idaho, Montana and Wyoming, other states represented included South Dakota, Nevada, California, Washington, Missouri, Indiana, Illinois, Nebraska and New York.
Panelists at Friday's conference sessions included, among others, Anita Miller from Albuquerque, Ralph Becker from Salt Lake City, Martin Leitner from Kansas City and Elizabeth Estill of the U.S. Forest Service.

Over the two days, the conference addressed issues involving wildlife habitat protection, growth management, transportation planning, development impact fees, local control of drilling and mining, performance standards, and legal issues involved in land use cases.

Several new Rocky Mountain Land Use Institute's annual conference, publications, workshops and other activities provide the College of Law with the national distinction of being the only law school in the country with an affiliated institute devoted exclusively to educational, research and service activities related to land use planning and development law issues. Many of these activities are staffed by DU law student volunteers.

The Rocky Mountain Land Use Institute's publications are marketed nationally. The Institute's annual conference, publications, workshops and other activities provide the College of Law with the national distinction of being the only law school in the country with an affiliated institute devoted exclusively to educational, research and service activities related to land use planning and development law issues. One of the nation's foremost law librarians, Alfred J. Coco, has been appointed to the University of Denver Law Faculty,” the Rocky Mountain News reported on April 13, 1972.

Alfred J. Coco left his post as librarian of the University of Houston College of Law to accept the DU appointment effective July 1, 1972. Thus, DU Law School gained a new law librarian and a full professor of law.

In addition to his responsibilities at the College of Law, Coco was charged with the task of developing a Law Librarianship degree in conjunction with DU's Graduate School of Library Science. That he did. He directed the Master of Law Librarianship program for both the College of Law and the Graduate School of Librarianship from 1973 until 1985 (when closure of the Graduate School of Librarianship terminated this degree program).

Coco directed the Law Library from his appointment until 1988 when he elected to spend full time as a law professor thus relinquishing his duties as director.

Now, twenty-two years later, Al has decided to retire. At the end of the Spring 1994 semester, he became Professor Emeritus at the College of Law. This allows him to devote his full time and attention to his family and to library consulting for law firms and other legal institutions.

Al has brought great distinction to the College of Law for his foresight in planning the law library, including the construction of the current Westminster Law Library, his early recognition and implementation of electronic storage and retrieval of legal materials and his numerous professional and community activities. For example, he served as president of the American Association of Law Libraries, 1977-78, and president of the Southwest Association of Law Libraries, 1965.

Coco gained his bachelor's degree at the University of Texas, his doctor of jurisprudence from St. Mary's University School of Law and master's of Law Librarianship from the University of Washington.

His wife, Joyce Manning Coco, a distinguished artist in her own right, was enraged with then Dean Robert B. Yegge in 1972 when Coco accepted the offer to join the DU Law faculty. She vowed not to speak to Yegge for moving her from her native Houston to Denver. She now reports that her rage was unfounded. Denver is now at the center of her heart and clearly her home.

The Cocos have two sons, Paul and Brandon. The whole family intends to stay in Colorado the rest of their years, not withstanding Al's formal retirement and elevation to emeritus professor rank.

Robert B. Yegge, MA'58, JD'59
David Barnes was a speaker and small group discussion leader at an Association of American Law Schools' workshop on family and juvenile law held in Washington, D.C.

Arthur Best has published "Peace, Wealth, Happiness and Small Claims Courts: A Case Study," in Fordham Urban Law Journal. The article is co-authored with a group of College of Law students, and was the result of a volunteer project that observed the workings of the Denver Small Claims Court.

Jerry Borison has organized a Volunteer Income Tax Assistance Program ("VITA") to enable students to offer tax assistance to low income individuals. He helped organize the first annual Casino Night which raised funds for the DU Law Loan Forgiveness Program. Most recently, Professor Borison and his wife Meg Borison, JD'81, had a 7 pound baby boy, Spencer Richard.

Burt Brody published "A Reform that Forces Fundamental Change," in The Sporting News, January 17, 1994, urging that the NCAA direct its focus to competition by duly enrolled students and eliminate the current pattern of athletic competition by individuals who are not competitively admissible to the schools on whose teams they play.

Jay Brown was a participant in a recent Colorado Bar Association securities program.

Ed Dauer served as the moderator and program chair for a joint American Law Institute/American Bar Association/National Center for Preventive Law conference on corporate compliance in Washington, D.C., in January. Also that month, he served as the chair of the Center for Public Resources Legal Awards Program.

Jan Laitos published "Federal CERCLA Liability for Abandoned Mines," in the February, 1994 Colorado Lawyer. In April Professor Laitos signed a contract with the Foundation Press to write a casebook on the Law of Hazardous and Toxic Waste Control. He is now under contract with the West Publishing Co. (Natural Resources Law), Little Brown (Constitutional Protection of Private Property) and Foundation Press (Hazardous and Toxic Waste Control).

Ved Nanda served on the steering committee for the ABA Section of International Law and Practice's fall/winter meeting in Denver.

Rock Pring conducted a seminar in Eugene, Oregon, at a National Environmental Public Interest Law Conference in March. His topic was Strategic Lawsuits Against Public Participation (SLAPP). Also in March, he presented a talk, "Bug and Bunny Barristers" as part of a continuing legal education program "Protecting Our Backyard" covering legal strategies for preserving the state's open spaces.
Edward Roche Jr., recently completed a chapter on Limited Liability Companies for Holderness & Wunnice, Legal Opinion Formbook, (Wiley Law, 1994) co-authored by Professor Mark Vogel. In addition, he has completed an article on limited liability companies for Jurisconsultus, a law journal published by Kanto Gakuin University in Odawara, Japan.

Joyce Sterling was a speaker and small group discussion leader at an Association of American Law Schools workshop on family and juvenile law held in Washington, D.C.

As you read through this edition of the alumni newsletter, I hope you feel the energy which YOU, the alumni, add to the College of Law. Our numbers after May graduation total just over 9,000 alumni. Fifty one percent of metro Denver attorneys registered with the Colorado Bar Association are DU law graduates. The College of Law family represented by these numbers are a source of support to all of us at the law school.

Our reunions are becoming events not to be missed. Outside lectures and conferences are greatly enriched by the participation of our alumni. You are directly helping our students through your participation in placement conferences, IALS programs, as adjunct or part-time faculty, and of course, as generous donors.

Your accomplishments in the community reflect well on both the profession of law and the College of Law. Your friendship with each other and us at the law school is gratifying.

I am proud to applaud your accomplishments. Please continue to provide us with your indefatigable energy.

In June, two new directors will be added to our office. Johanna Kelly is the new director of Development coming to us from Yale University where she worked as an associate director for Leadership and Major Gifts, as well as an associate director for Corporate and Foundation Relations. Johanna is excited to meet all of you and very pleased to be returning home to Denver. Karen Middleton will also begin work in June as the director of Operations for both Alumni and Development. We are thrilled with the addition of these women and look forward to an exciting year.
On Saturday, May 14, 1994, 259 students received their juris doctorate degree from the College of Law.

SOLANO RECEIVES HONORARY DEGREE

Henry L. Solano, U. S. Attorney, District of Colorado, received an honorary Doctor of Law degree at the 1994 Commencement ceremony. Chancellor Daniel Ritchie and Dean Dennis Lynch celebrated the event by hosting a luncheon following commencement ceremonies.

Henry Solano discusses graduation with Professors Roberto Corrada and Arthur Best.

Dean Lynch, Chancellor Ritchie and Trustee Bill Coors listen to discussion at Solano luncheon.

A lovely ending to a perfect day.
Spring semester is a busy time for students at the College of Law. Moot court competitions, award presentations and student programs abound. Congratulations to all those who participated in this year’s activities.

WRITING AWARDS

The 1994 Dufford & Brown Writing Awards were presented by Phil Dufford and Dean Lynch to students Noel Barnes, David Leavenworth and Lisa Lenore Seal. Honorable mentions went to Anthony Giacomini, Jonah Goldstein and Lee Harrell.

Bill Vobach, JD’94, won the first annual Dorr, Carson, Sloan and Peterson Writing Award. Robert Dorr, JD’74, presented the $500 award to Vobach for the winning paper on developments in patent law. The competition is also supported by the Patent & Technical Law Society.

COMPETITIONS

The DU Jessup Moot Court team made the semi-finals in the Jessup Moot Court International Law Competition. Team members were Will Allen, Chad Atkins and Bryan Garrett.

A team of DU Graduate Tax Program students won a silver medal in this year’s Arthur Andersen Tax Challenge graduate division. DU received $5,000 in scholarship funds for the second-place finish. The team, composed of Shelley Memmer, Chris Tranchetti, Alicia Green, and Adrienne Boyd, was one of 98 from 78 institutions.

Christopher Decker and Joanne Lewers took fourth place in the regional Client Counseling Competition held in Hawaii.
STUDENT AWARDS

Students and faculty gathered on April 28, 1994, for the annual presentation of student leadership awards and student awards to faculty. Students were recognized for their significant contributions to the life of the Law School and the community.

Dean Lynch and Lauri Katz, recipient of the Most Innovative Program Award, pictured here with one of the students at Phillips Elementary school who was tutored in the program.

Barry Shupe, President of the Natural Resources Law Society, received a big thanks from the Law School for his contributions to the campus recycling program.

Professor Julie Nice received the outstanding teacher award from the day division students.

Professor Stephen Pepper garnered the evening division's award for outstanding teacher, presented here by assistant dean for Student Affairs, Rufina Hernandez.
Two DU teams competed in the Association of Trial Lawyers of America’s Student Trial Advocacy Regional Competition in Portland, Oregon. Team 1, Melanie Names, Brian Sullivan, Keith Olivera and Victor Stazimnewon the competition and advanced to the final competition in Miami. Team 11, Eve Moulding, Steve Memj Stuart Ivimey, and Diana Godwin, also did a great job. Special thanks to team coach, Karen Steinhauser, and Professor Sheila Hyatt, program supervisor, for their time and tremendous efforts.

ANNIVERSARY OF BROWN v. BOARD OF EDUCATION OBSERVED

Linda Brown Thompson and Cheryl Brown Henderson, daughters of Reverend Brown, and almost 200 people including students, area judges, lawyers and educators celebrated the 40th anniversary of the landmark civil rights case Brown v. Board of Education. Assistant Dean Rufina Hernandez gave an introductory speech and Colorado Supreme Court Justice Gregory Kellam Scott reflected on the case. The event was sponsored by the Black Law Students’ Association and coordinated by student Shanise Black. Students from Smiley Middle School, involved in an “Odyssey of the Mind” competition which this year focused on the case, also attended.

CASINO NIGHT RAISES MONEY FOR LOAN FORGIVENESS PROGRAM

The First Annual Casino Night raised over $1,500 for the University of Denver Loan Forgiveness Program. The event was a great success, attracting over 200 people. Pictured are event organizer Ann England (far right) and other students who worked to make the night happen.

The annual end of the school year celebration was held on Thursday, April 21, with a band and beer.

ART IN THE ATRIUM
On April 21st, the Westminster Law Library sponsored "Art in the Atrium" which displayed the works of six diverse artists. Proceeds from the show went to benefit the library, and five donated works have enriched the library’s permanent art collection.
SPEARMAN SCHOLARSHIP FUND ENDOWED

The College of Law is pleased to announce the creation of the Herbert L. Spearman Endowed Scholarship Fund which was established through a gift annuity by Mrs. Jacquelyn Beatty Spearman.

Herbert Spearman graduated from Westminster Law School with an LLB in 1980 and converted his degree to a Juris Doctor when the College of Law absorbed Westminster. After graduating,

Mr. Spearman became associated with the law firm of Yege, Hall, Treece & Evans. Shortly thereafter, an interest in the oil business was sparked, and he became an independent landman and oil producer.

In 1972, he married Jacquelyn Beatty and they combined their families. “He was an excellent husband, a good provider, and a gentle, thoughtful man,” wrote Mrs. Spearman.

“Herb lived an interesting and vibrant life that touched the heart and soul of many human beings. He will be long remembered and missed by his many friends and family. He would be very proud of having the Herbert Lee Spearman Endowed Scholarship created in his memory,” she continued.

The Placement Office has presented a wide variety of career planning sessions during the spring semester. An extremely popular topic, "Making the Career Connection: How to Go Solo and How to Choose an Alternative Career," was presented in late March.

At the session, many alumni and friends of the law school treated students and graduates to their wit, wisdom and experience on a cold, snowy Saturday warmed by the enthusiasm of the speeches and audience.

Terry Lawson and Michael Smith of S.B.C. & Associates Management Consultants, discussed the business and marketing aspects of opening a solo practice.

Our own Bob Truhlar, JD'81, Gina Bischofs, JD'91, Emily Anderson, JD'89 and R.C. Stephenson, JD'69, were joined by marketeers par excellence Kathleen Odle, JD'88, Sheila Gutterman, JD'87, David Franzblau (Strategic Marketing Group, Inc.) and Michael R. Smith (Deisch, Marion & Bresidee P.C.) to talk about their experience with going solo and marketing.

The day ended with the non-traditional: mystery writer Warwick Downing, LLB'56, historic preservationist Cornelia Keatinge, JD'82, Student Law Office administrator, Sally Marish, JD'92, and airline contract negotiator, Bob Neuhardt.

The program was a huge success thanks to our speakers and captivated audience! If you would like to be part of a career presentation, or have an interesting idea for a career program, call Rita Zaslowzky at 871-6124.

ALUMNI COUNCIL FOCUSES ON PLACEMENT ISSUES

Rita Zaslowzky, director of Placement, working with student David Demaray.

Ned Giles, JD'73, led the Alumni Council in a discussion of the current placement program at the College of Law.

Gerry Brimmer, JD'83, participated in the break-out group which discussed the College of Law's mentor program.

Christie Truitt, JD'82, chair of the 1993 DU Law Stars dinner, and Alumni Council President Mark Boscoe, JD'81, present Dean Lynch with a check for $16,650 representing the proceeds from the Alumni Council's first DU Law Stars dinner. This money will be split between the Student Law Office and Alumni Merit Scholarship fund.
DU HONORS COLLEGE OF LAW AT FOUNDERS DAY

The coveted DU Evans Award was presented to William Buchtel Collister, JD'51, for his continual and exceptional commitment to the University of Denver. Bill's parents were married by DU Chancellor Henry Buchtel, who was also an ordained minister, thus giving Bill his middle name. He has practiced law in Denver, specializing in oil and gas exploration and, most recently, concentrating his efforts in elder law. Bill and his wife Alice have been tireless supporters of DU.

Our own Philip E. Gauthier was presented with the Distinguished Service to the University Award. Phil was director of Alumni and Public Relations at the College of Law for 19 years until his retirement in 1992, giving Bill his middle name. He has practiced law in Denver, specializing in oil and gas exploration, and, most recently, concentrating his efforts in elder law. Bill and his wife Alice have been tireless supporters of DU.

YEGGE SCHOLARSHIP SURPASSES ENDOWMENT LEVEL

We are most excited to report that the Robert B. Yegge Hispanic Scholarship Fund has now passed the endowment level. To qualify as an endowment there must be $25,000 in the account before income is generated for scholarship distribution.

In November 1991, a committee chaired by Ralph Torres, JD'70, decided to create the Robert B. Yegge Hispanic Scholarship as a tribute to the contributions Professor Yegge made to increasing the number of Hispanic lawyers in the Southwest. Through a unique recruitment program created by Professor Yegge, a select group of Hispanics were offered scholarships to the College of Law. Yegge's efforts have led to an increase in the number of Hispanic students admitted to law schools and in the number of practicing Hispanic attorneys throughout Colorado, New Mexico, Texas and California. This program became a model for similar initiatives across the nation, including the Ford Foundation's CLEO program.

Receptions were held in Santa Fe and Denver, and mailings were sent soliciting funds for the scholarship. As of this printing, there is $28,328.00 in the Yegge Endowed Hispanic Scholarship Fund. The first scholarships will be awarded to students in the fall 1994 class. Today, each new dollar contributed to the Yegge Endowed Hispanic Scholarship generates income which will be directly distributed to worthy scholarship recipients. The goal is to double the size of this endowment by expanding the base of contributors.

The College of Law would like to extend special thanks to Steering Committee Chair Ralph Torres, and the following original contributors who are committed to perpetuating opportunities for Hispanics to become leaders in the profession of law.

Donald Smith Jr., JD, has joined the Denver-based firm Judicial Resolutions that specializes in out of court resolution of legal disputes. Smith retired in early 1993 as a Colorado Court of Appeals judge and served as district judge for Arapahoe, Douglas, Elbert and Lincoln Counties prior to his appointment to the appeals court.

Richard Harris, JD, wrote to fill us in on his life since graduation. He settled in Tulsa, Oklahoma where he has been an oil and gas practitioner. He tells us that he's stuck his fingers into the oil business, explored for oil and gas, lost money in various ventures, raised cows and calves, learned to fly, raised and liberated two boys and "in general has lived happily ever after." He sends his best to the "older crowd from 1962."

1963
J. Worthen DeYoung, JD, of Kansas City, wrote of his fond recollections of the many great professors he had while attending the College of Law. Sticking most in his mind was Professor Gitelman and his Conflicts of Law class. Almost 30 years later in 1992, DeYoung taught Real Estate Transactions with Professor Gitelman at the University of Arkansas and loved the experience.

JENNY BADO REMEMBERED

On Thursday, May 5, The College of Law joined with friends from the Park Hill campus and the University Park campus of the University of Denver in a memorial service paying tribute to Jenny Bado. A long-time member of the food services staff at the University, 53 year-old Bado was killed in the Mason Hall cafeteria on the Park Hill campus.

At the memorial service, Associate Dean
Arthur Best summed up the feelings of the DU community by stating, “We miss Jenny Bado very much because she was a good friend and because she did her work with so much enthusiasm and thoroughness. Her graciousness and dedication were models for us all.” Jenny will be greatly missed.

100 Years of Tradition

Acknowledging our vital links to the past, the College of Law installed a permanent display recognizing significant moments in our more than 100 year history. In addition, each classroom in Lowell Thomas was dedicated to a particular ten-year span of time and is hung with pictorial memorabilia of the period.
