STRATEGY:

We have the opportunity to tap into the childhood zeal of exploration. Children aren't much for scenic overlooks. They want to be as active as their imaginations.

So our invitation will not be "come look at this" it will be "come play in this."

The property itself is a magnificent portal for adventures large and small.

A playground. Not a postcard.

There must be an adventure gene.

What else could create the feeling—not long after our first steps—that calls us to lace up our boots and see what's out there to discover. While the feeling persists, it takes energy and resolve to encourage it. And it takes an environment—a landscape—that urges us to listen to the voice in our heads... and venture out.

So here's to adventure—be it far away, or right here at home.

FREE TO ROAM

To your heart's content.

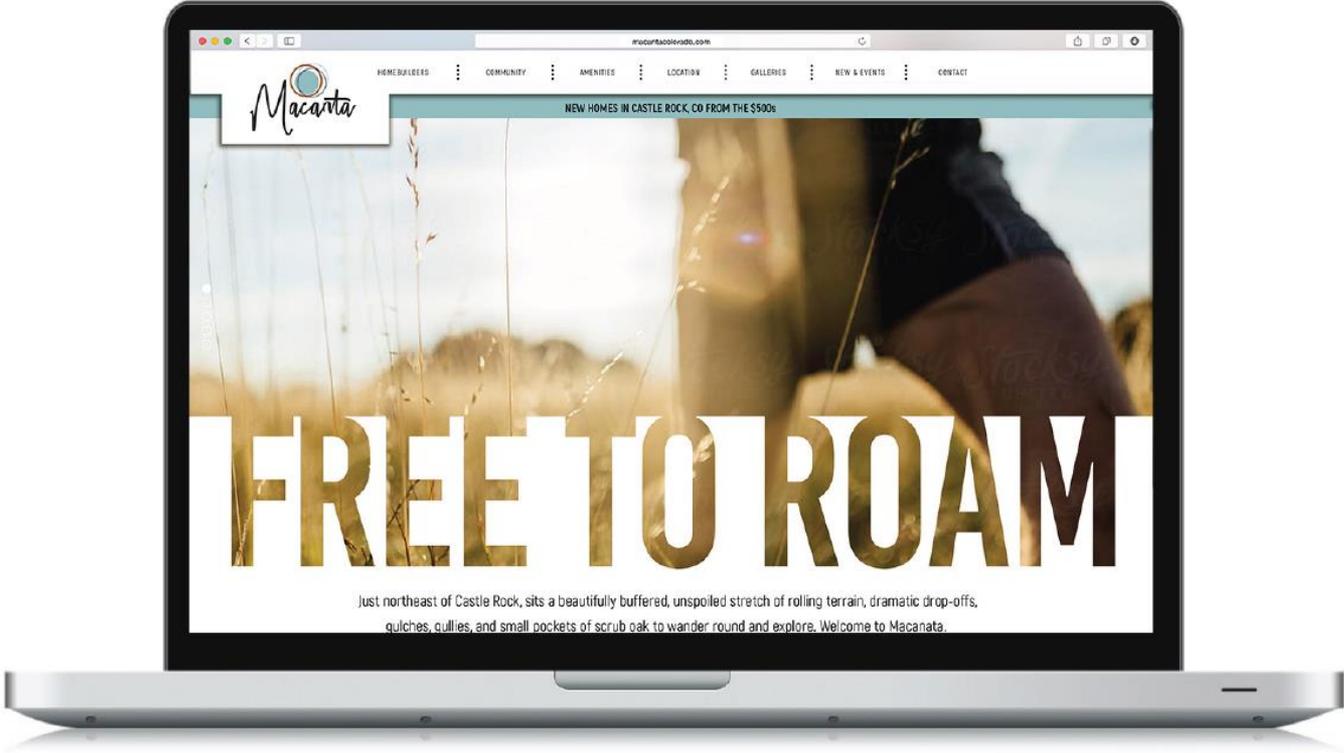

In a quiet moment, by a rocky stream, there your heart's content is at the heart of our commitment. Because free to roam is not a vacation and an escape. And a correct holiday is all morning, taking your mind to sleep and waking up in a room. The best is when you're there that day.
